A:Live

The whole world is in constant motion and movement is an integral part of all life. Nothing living stands still, and the same applies to the modular kinetic installation A:Live created by Stefan Mihailovič. With a set of simple movements, A:Live forms endlessly complex and seemingly living compositions.

And if the body were not the soul, what is the soul?

A:Live

Life is never stagnant. On the contrary, it is in constant flux. Just as we are constantly moving and changing, so does the A:Live installation. Mihailovič designed A:Live to reflect the philosophy of the world's endless emergence through the movement of glass components which shift and rotate, making us perceive the entire sculpture a little differently each time we observe it.

While the installation is gradually lighting up, its glass components seem as if they are waking up and shaking off the mantle of darkness. The whole sculpture evokes a living organism, and a similar aesthetic can be observed in nature, for example in a swarm of bees or a shoal of fish.
